Five mental health centers in Detroit and one in Jackson have received federal grants to develop more comprehensive substance use treatment programs as the COVID-19 pandemic has created more service needs.

The federal Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration granted nearly $24 million to the six centers that also allows them to expand opioid addiction and suicide prevention services by becoming certified community behavioral health clinics.

The centers are the Neighborhood Service Organization ($4 million); Southwest Counseling Solutions Inc. ($3.95 million); Development Centers Inc. ($4 million); Faith Hope and Love Outreach Center ($3.97 million); Northeast Guidance Center ($4 million), all in Detroit; and LifeWays Community Mental Health ($3.88 million) in Jackson.

Robert Sheehan, CEO of the Community Mental Health Association of Michigan, said in a statement that the six new sites will help expand much needed mental health and substance abuse services in Michigan.

"This funding will dramatically improve the health and welfare of people in dozens of communities across Michigan," said Chuck Ingoglia, president and CEO of the National Council for Behavioral Health, in a statement.

"We're proud of the commitment by these six clinics to provide vital services by increasing access to evidence-based substance use and mental health treatment services, including 24/7 crisis care."
